The End is Nigh at It's All 2 Much

"The waters are rising. The deserts are burning. The sky is falling. The Earth is breaking. The animals and plants are dying. We are dying. Humanity is doomed."

So says the Cretin Collective as they present a series of apocalyptic artworks inspired by doomsday theories and prophecies at It's All 2 Much Art Gallery in their forthcoming exhibition aptly entitled "Doomsday", running from April 25th to May 25th.

The Cretins are Loch Ness, Bill Giles, SPZero76, Paul Monsters and Dom W, and are well known in and around Bristol and further afield for their street art murals in which their contrasting styles complement each other to achieve the final colourful and often humorous result.

Here we see their homage to Banksy, painted directly underneath his famous "Hanging Man" in Frogmore Street, Bristol, advertising their show last year at the Weapon of Choice Gallery.

PRESS RELEASE

A collaborative work
Copyright Loch Ness and Bill Giles

The Cretin Collective are no strangers to our gallery; last year we were treated to their “Expedition!” show (http://www.itsall2much.com/exhibit_130329.html) in which they displayed artifacts, field sketches, artist renditions, flora and fauna from their imaginary adventure in an imaginary land, a show which proved to be one of our most popular in 2013.

We have no doubt that this year’s Doomsday show will be just as successful and we are very much looking forward to adorning our gallery walls with their latest works.

There is a Facebook page for the event at: <https://www.facebook.com/events/254559221390104/> and information on each of the Cretins can be found on their individual artist pages on our website at: <http://www.itsall2much.com/artists.html>.

“Doomsday” by the Cretin Collective, from April 25th (private viewing evening) to May 25th at It’s All 2 Much Art Gallery, 124 Cheltenham Road, Montpelier, Bristol BS6 5RW.

For more information, please contact the gallery by telephone on 0117 924 7522 or by email at art@itsall2much.com.
