PRESS RELEASE

LEMAK is a self-taught urban street and gallery artist. Born in 1980, he is currently based in Bristol but originates from Fleetwood, UK. He was inspired to pick up a spray paint can by stencil artists such as Snik and Tank Petrol and started creating art in 2011.

He is developing a signature style of his own, merging the skills of his previous trade as a joiner with his artistic talents, and now specialises in reverse stencilling on glass. The lighting elements of the art bring out different features of the work, such as the intricate patterns of tattoos, in a distinct and unique way.

Much of Lemak's art explores and captures the natural beauty caught in the eyes and expressions of the female form, while as a big sci-fi fan he uses modern technology and lighting distinctively combined to give his work a whole new perspective for the viewer.

He is currently working on a side project, Sector 7, developing new techniques, and is aiming to do more street work and to collaborate with more artists in the future.

PRESS RELEASE

KEITH moved to Bristol in 2005 and found himself in a vibrant city full of great music, art and culture. In 2011, whilst on a career break and greatly influenced by the art that surrounded him as he walked through the streets, he decided to teach himself to paint. He chose the "Bristol Style", using the medium of spray paint.

Keith mostly paints scenes from the streets that inspired him in the first place; distinctive buildings, important moments in time and the individuals that make up what is the essence of the city that is Bristol.

He is a frequent contributor to charity art auctions as well as helping out at a local Bristol charity in his spare time.
